Winter Lights on The Greenway

North Meadow Hatchling

3.5' tall x 7' wide, Solar and grid powered

This Hatchling is nestled in North Meadow on The Greenway, with a half-round stage accessed from the boardwalk path. It is the brightest pavilion per square inch with over 6,000 blue, purple, and pink lights.

From this location: Visitors can easily see the Zakim Bridge, another result of the Big Dig project that created The Greenway. An iconic feature in Boston's skyline, the bridge spans 1,432 feet long and has a uniquely asymmetrical, hybrid design; an homage to the city's past and future.

North End Hatchling

7' tall x 14' wide, Grid powered

The second largest Hatchling on The Greenway, this location is easily accessible from Boston Public Market and Faneuil Hall.

From this location: Take a moment to honor the legacy of generations prior. Walk across the street to the intersection of Hanover and Surface Road to visit the Freedom Trail. You can also stroll over to one of The Greenway's newest public art installations, Going to Ground, from artist LaRissa Rogers, a visual reminder of a once forgotten past.

Rings Fountain Hatchling

8.5' tall x 17' wide, Grid powered

One of the two largest Hatchlings in this installation, this pavilion is a perfect location for gatherings; the concrete steps of the fountain provide ample seating for spectators enjoying the show. To illuminate the space, the Hatchling has over 12,000 programmable lights and illuminates in a range of patterns and colors.

From this location: Though the iconic Rings Fountain is off for the winter, visitors can still take a look at the intricate pavers, jigsawing in a spiral pattern.

Rowes Wharf Hatchlings

8.5' tall x 17' wide and 4.5' tall x 9' wide, Grid powered

This location serves as the only dual installation of the Hatchlings, showcasing the size variance between pavilions when placed side by side. Enjoy photographing and don't forget to tag @rosekennedygreenway and @hhh_designstudio

From this location: Spend some time celebrating the natural and city landscape during the day and at night. Enjoy the atmosphere of the park and take a moment to look up, both at the city architecture and for migratory birds.

High Street Hatchling

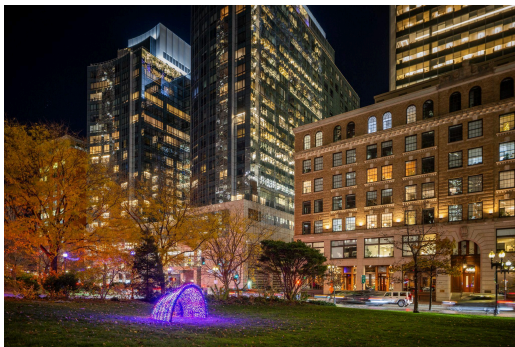

7' tall x 14' wide, Grid powered

This Hatchling is tucked inside a ring of trees, making it less visible from the street. Large enough to immerse yourself in the sparkling lights, this Hatchling is perfect for a quieter or more contemplative experience.

From this location: This Hatchling creates a pathway to embrace Boston Harbor. Enjoy a moment along the ocean and take in the sea breeze.

Congress Street Hatchling

5.5' tall x 11' wide, Solar powered

Located along a curving path with no street lights, this Hatchling is particularly bright and colorful, featuring over 12,000 lights in rainbow hues and vibrant patterns.

From this location: Take a look around at this urban landscape and notice the lack of electrical infrastructure. Typically quieter and less illuminated than other areas of The Greenway, this location presented a unique opportunity to create light in the darkness. This particular Hatchling is solar powered and has been strategically placed to take advantage of solar exposure.

Dewey Square Hatchling

4.5' tall x 9' wide, Solar and Grid power

This Hatchling features an animated rainbow of colors intended to compliment the iconic Dewey Square mural.

From this location: This location is visible from South Station, an ideal starting place for a Hatchlings tour. The smallest Hatchling at Chin Park in Chinatown is a short walk away before you travel north on The Greenway to visit the rest.

Chin Park Hatchling

2.5' tall x 5' wide, Grid power

Visit the smallest Hatchling on The Greenway tucked atop a tiny hill at the gateway to Chin Park, visible to both pedestrians and people driving by. This Hatchling draws color inspiration from the Chinatown Park Gate, featuring vivid red and a mix of warm tones.

From this location: Chinatown's rich history is on display throughout Mary Soo Hoo Park and Chin Park. Enjoy the Far Away, From Home, by artist Zhidong Zhang, the community gathering spaces, and the play areas.
